A Letter From the Editor

Jaclyn Harris, Director of Web and Print of The Talon News, looks back on her experiences at Argyle High School and in the Talon, especially the experiences that helped her become the person she is today.

Growing Pains 18-19

Students and administration reflect on the drastic growth of the school district in the recent years and the loss of the small town feel. Argyle will soon be classified as a 5A school district and with that comes new competition.

Jaclyn Harris

The butterfly effect is defined as how one small change can lead to an unexpected outcome. In my case, a schedule mishap led me to a community that would become one of the most important parts of my life. I had no idea Talon would introduce me to some of the greatest friends, opportunities, and experiences of my high school career.

I began my journalism adventure by trying out every aspect of the discipline I could. Photography, writing, broadcast, I loved it all. As I progressed through the class, my passions became more fine-tuned. I directed my focus toward writing and digital media, and now I am planning on pursuing a dual degree in marketing and journalism with an emphasis in strategic communications at the University of Missouri in Columbia.

I've had the opportunity to travel across the state

my confidence in both my writing and interpersonal skills.

I have lived in Argyle since I was four years old, and I have had the privilege and the country to competitions in Dallas, San Antonio, Chicago, New York, and most recently, Washington D.C. These trips and the competitions taught me to branch out, growing of growing up and evolving alongside the community that is so important to me. I can say with confidence that I would not be where I am today if it were not for the incredible teachers, administrators, and peers that instilled in me a strong work ethic and pushed me out of my comfort zone to pursue things in my life that I otherwise might have been too nervous to chase.

I believe that the class of 2020 has the drive and the passion needed to make a difference in the world. I am honored to have reported for my class as they took on volunteer projects, won state championships, and grew into the incredible people they are today. It is evident by not only their superficial successes, but also the kindness present in their day-to-day actions that the class of 2020 is a truly special group of people.

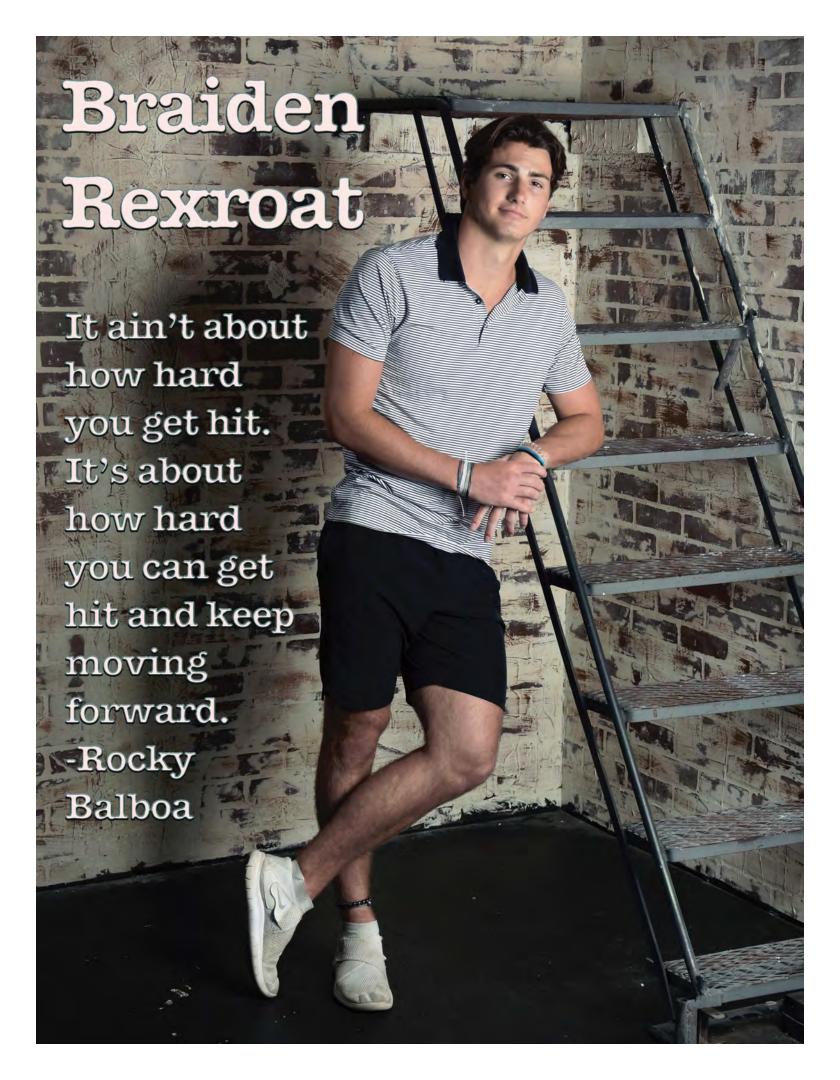

COVID-19 Causes Uncertainty in Student Body

Senior year is the culmination of 13 years of hard work and dedication. It's supposed to be a time of celebration, a time to say goodbye to your old life and hello to new adventures and opportunities.

However, the outbreak of the coronavirus and Governor Greg Abbott's orders have caused school to be closed for the remainder of the year.

"I want the seniors to know that our goal is for all of their normal end of year activities to continue," Principal John King said. "We may have to be flexible and adjust, but we will do everything in our power to make these things happen as planned."

Although the coronavirus has impacted everyone on campus, it has affected the senior class most of all.

"Each year, the senior class looks forward to the last quarter of their senior year: grades are frozen for class ranking purposes, UIL events are headed toward state championships, prom is just around the corner, and the finish line (educationally speaking) is in sight," King said. "The coronavirus has definitely put a damper on things and has caused uncertainty for our seniors. Everything that was once so clear and close to happening seems unclear now."

In addition to all of the possible cancelations, seniors have not been able to find comfort with their peers due to social distancing.

"Normally, most people would be ecstatic at the prospect of missing school for a month or more," senior Elizabeth West said. "But instead, this period spent in isolation to lessen the effects of a pandemic has felt like anything but a break. These next few months which were supposed to be one of the best times of our lives are instead full of panic, chaos, and loneliness."

To many students, high school feels incomplete without all of the "lasts" of senior year.

"The coronavirus has completely changed what I've been working for over these last 12 years," an anonymous senior said. "I won't have my last day and my last chance to say goodbye and thank you to all my teachers and friends who have helped me these past four years."

The virus also has impacted students' lives outside of the social aspect.

"TMSCA's cancellation prevented me and other seniors from getting scholarship money," senior Ryan Ross said. "Graduation may not even happen which, to me, would undermine the many years of studying we've dedicated."

The final week of senior year is one filled with bittersweet moments that the class of 2020 may not get to experience.

"Most of us have been walking down the same halls for six years now," another anonymous senior said. "Seeing all the seniors before us walking down the halls with their families, getting a rose at the rose ceremony, and then seeing them graduate. Throughout the six years I've been here I've always wanted to know what it's like to walk down the halls for the last time and to walk on the stage at graduation, screaming and clapping for all my friends as they get their turn to walk down the stage but at the moment all of that is a blur."

Besides missing out on the final weeks of their last year of high school, students also have to deal with the fear and chaos the virus brings in its wake.

"I think the fear of what comes next is more disheartening and difficult to grapple with than anything," senior Tatum Earp said. "So many rumors are spread through the media about what the next steps could begovernment sanctioned quarantine and the continued downward spiral of the economy. I think we're all definitely saddened by the possibility of not going to prom or walking across the stage at graduation, but more than that, I think we're afraid for our families and the wild world we're about to enter."

Seniors' Thoughts

Sonali Gandhi

"The negative effects of the coronavirus have allowed me to value my peers even more and take a moment to reflect on what is really important in life. All in all, corona has led to many disappointments, but it has also made me value my time in high school even more than before."

Katie Boyzuick

"It turned a memorable and accomplishing year into one filled with fear and disappointment. It's a shame."

Maddey Martin

"For the last four years, we have all worked for one thing. Senior year was supposed to be the prime year and for all of it to end from a virus, crazy."

Hannah Wood

"For all the senior spring athletes, we may never get to play our last season with the teammates we love. This is really hard knowing all of this could be over and we will never have gotten to spend our last few months together with all of our friends."

Anonymous

"It has worried us and made us question if we will have our senior prom or if we'll be able to walk the stage for graduation. It has taken away all of our last memories together."

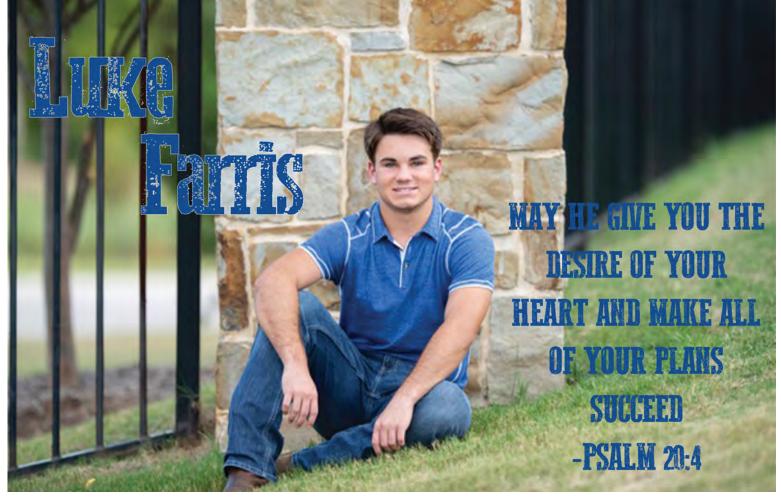

Anonymous

"It made a lot of my lasts come sooner than expected, and I just wasn't ready for it. There's also the chance that I'll never see some of my friends or teachers again."

With school currently closed due to the coronavirus, many seniors worry that graduation will be canceled. (Georgia Penn / The Talon News)

Next Man Up - Dec. 17, 2019 Max Van Drunen | Contrbutor

The Argyle Eagles' undefeated season came to a close on Friday, Dec. 6, when they lost to the reigning 4A state champion, the Waco La Vega Pirates, 44-20 in the fourth round of the playoffs. Though the Eagles didn't get the results they were looking for, the season was record-breaking.

Senior Bo Hogeboom made history in the passing game, finishing the season as the all-time touchdown passer in school history, with 102 in his career. His season consisted of huge amounts of scoring, throwing 57 touchdowns, along with 3,274 passing yards (a 352-yard improvement from his junior season). Hogeboom threw 13 interceptions, 21 in his career, including three in the team's season finale.

Hogeboom will stick to his primary sport, baseball, when he goes on to college. On Nov. 13, he officially signed to play baseball at the University of Houston. The quarterback position will be in the hands of either CJ Rogers or Jett Copeland in the 2020 season.

The running attack at the beginning of the season was dominated by junior running back Tito Byce. Unfortunately for Byce, his season came to an end after tearing his ACL in the first half of a game against the Melissa Cardinals. The NextManUp mentality really came into play when senior Luke Farris took over and had the best game of his career.

Farris was not used very often in the first six games, rushing for less than 40 yards in four of those games. However, after the Melissa game, the Eagles relied on him to make plays down the stretch and into the postseason. He ran for over 100 yards six times, two of which he ran for over 200 yards. He scored 19 touchdowns and had 1,263 total scrimmage yards.

The wide receivers on the team made it really easy for Hogeboom to complete his passes, especially when he found junior Cole Kirkpatrick. The connection between the two was a regular occurrence this season, completing 68 passes to Kirkpatrick. Kirkpatrick was a touchdown machine this season, catching 29 passes in the end zone, breaking the previous record of 19 which was set by Dillon Carter last season.

Senior wide-outs Alex Gonzales and Cade Merka also ended their football careers in a great way. The Eagles will need to find replacements for Gonzales and Merka, because if next season is anything like this year, Kirkpatrick will be getting double-teamed a lot.

It's one thing to have excellent running backs in the backfield, wide receivers dominating downfield, and a true gunslinging quarterback to get the ball to the wide receivers, but to have great offensive line is a quintessential part of an offense. The youth of this o-line is bright, with the lone senior guard, Micah Hiter. Juniors Jack Tucker, Caden Reeves and Blake Spence, along with sophomore Sheridan Wilson will all return to play next season.

A stellar offense was complemented with a classic "Black Swarm" defense. The defense was able to be aggressive on the line of scrimmage, to tackle in the open field, and was able to shut down the passing game. Seniors Jake Sullivan and Riley Hartman were very important players against the pass, collecting six interceptions (four by Sullivan), and defending 20 passes between the two. Hartman was also third on the team in tackles with 81.

One of the biggest contributions came from sophomore Will Ramsey, the young brother of former Argyle defensive back Blake Ramsey. He was able to effectively stop the opposing offense on the ground and through the air. He had 72 tackles, three games of 10+ tackles and six tackles for loss. Ramsey's best game of the season was in a win against Liberty-Eylau, where he had eight tackles, four tackles for loss, an interception, two passes defended, and a forced fumble. He was also able to be active on special teams, blocking a punt against Melissa.

The dynamic duo of junior Davis Elsey and senior Braiden Rexroat was a nightmare for opposing offensive lines. Rexroat led the team in tackles (88), sacks (8), tackles for loss (19), forced fumbles (3) and having the team's only pick-six.

Fan seniors Kassidy Reeves, Victoria Locastro, Megan Russell and Grace Rash show up to support the team as they face the LaVega Pirates at McLane Stadium in Waco, Texas. (Sloan Dial | The Talon News)

For most people, high school is much more than just a buffer before college and time of learning. High school is a time for students to find who they are, make lifelong friends, and create unforgettable memories.

As this school year draws to a close during this time of great uncertainty and panic, this year's senior class is painfully aware of the importance of these final school memories that they might not experience. Despite this however, this class is pushing ahead. With great character and strength, the 2020 class is thriving in the midst of tragedy. Among this class, the greatest strength and character can be found among the K-12 students, who in an ever changing and fast motioned world, have remained completely loyal and dedicated to Argyle.

Growing up in a difficult time in not just local but also national history is not an easy feat for any group of people. Born into a time of fear and violence, this class found hapdodged seniors as middle schoolers and terrorized freshmen as upperclassmen.

For this group that has shown such great strength, nothing is more important than those around them. For many, the friends they end piness and comradery. Living through economic hardship and recession, this class forged hope and happiness. Watching their hometown grow slowly and painfully, they happily this year with are the ones they forged on the jungle gym of Hilltop Elementary or on the spherical swings of the Intermediate school. These friendships, which have outlived and outshined any fear or hardship, have allowed this special group of people to always find light in the darkness and to always find a smiling face in the middle of tragedy. The sense of community that has bound Argyle together and become the defining trait of our town truly is greatest among these students who have opened their hearts to each other and lived their lives together.

As these amazing students begin to forge their own paths in this uncertain world, they might not remember the difficult times, they might not remember the uncertainty of the current world, but they will never forget the friends they have, the memories they created, or the home they made.

Growing Pains - Feb. 13, 2020

Jaclyn Harris | Ashlynn Roberts

As the district approaches its final years as a part of the 4A classification, administrative leaders are taking measures to ensure that the future of the district is not lost in its rapid expansion.

A school board election will be held in May to vote on how citizens want the district to look in the future and to further expand the current middle school campus.

"If you live in This any part of Argyle park! ISD, you need to be registered to vote and you need to be planning to vote in our election for school board in May of 2020," Superintendent Telena Wright said. "As a citizen in Argyle ISD, you need to have your voice heard through your vote."

The district has grown a record 12.9% in the last year and has received about 400 move-ins from surrounding districts. When current Principal John King joined the district in 2007, there were roughly 400 students enrolled at the high school.

"To date, we have 1,052 [students], so it has more than doubled—pushing tripled since I've been here in 13 years," King said. "We gained about 120 students this year and we'll gain about 120 more next year, so the growth is really astronomical at this point compared to where we have been."

Prior to 2010, the district experienced an annual loss of enrollment. That changed in 2010 when the school district implemented the Limited Open Enrollment (LOE) program.

"We allowed students to transfer in," King said.
"We had an application that you could fill out, and if you were selected you got to come into the district. Once you came in, as long as there were no discipline or attendance concerns, then you got to stay and your siblings could come as well."

After open enrollment, the population boom began, with families entering the district and moving into newly built subdivisions. The two fastest growing neighborhoods, Harvest and Canyon Falls, have 2,000 future lots to develop and are expected to build a combined 300 homes annually.

"I think the growing enrollment can benefit the district provided that the growth is managed, and so far we have done a great job of that," Wright said. "This district can well be 5A in 2022 after the next alignment."

To accommodate the increasing enrollment, the district opened a new middle school for the 2016-2017 school year. In the fall of 2018, a wing was added at the high school to cope with growth and to replace the portable trailers that had previously been used.

"The plan for next summer is to flip-flop campuses," King said, "so the middle school will come up here and the high school will go down there."

The new high school campus will have tennis courts and practice baseball and softball fields. The band will have a practice area and the football team will have a couple practice fields as well. The only thing missing will be the large stadium.

"If you're familiar with the middle school campus, right now they have one big academic wing, and there's another full academic wing identical to that one that will be built," King said. "The cafeteria will be expanded to accommodate the high school needs and there will be an auditorium."

The new high school building is set to be completed by August of 2021 and will hold 1,750 students. The current high school enrollment sits at 1,052 students.

"When we had 400 kids, I knew every face and almost everybody's name," King said. "With over 1,000 students, it's hard for me.

I know a lot of faces, but there's still days when I walk around and think 'Is that even one of our students?' There's got to be a way for us to easily identify who our students are and who they aren't."

Senior Lanie Rodgers has called Argyle home since she was four years old and has witnessed first-hand how growth has impacted the district.

"When I started here, we had 45-60 kids in our kindergarten class and we grew up like that," Rodgers said. "It didn't get big until my eighth grade year when a lot of people moved in."

The district growth is not expected to slow anytime soon, with 430 to 500 single family homes expected to be built annually over the next five years. According to recent demographics, the district should hit 6,000 students by 2025-26 school and be well over 8,000 by 2029-30.

"I don't know if this is a positive or negative, but [it is] change," King said. "If you're a person who likes a bigger atmosphere, then it's a positive for you, but if you're someone who wants to keep Argyle small, then it's probably a negative for you. Either way you look at it, it's just going to be different than what you're accustomed to."

According to Rodgers, the movement towards 5A brings new students and competition, but the loss of a certain small-town feel.

"It's good because there is harder competition, but it's also bad because the town doesn't really have that community feel anymore," Rodgers said. "I feel like Argyle will always have that bubble, but with this growing we aren't as attached anymore."

Despite the potential community consequences, the school will move forward with its plans for expansion and use funding from the potential bond package to finish developing the future high school.

"All the fine arts halls will be added to this bond package," King said. "There will be a big, nice competition gym added to this package. There will be some more administrative offices added and a counseling suite, which will be very nice for [the counselors]."

For the first several years at the new campus, high school students involved in certain sports will be bussed to the current high school to use the large stadium.

"The bond that passed in 2017 was a $166 million bond and it did not include a stadium," Wright said. "In order to build a stadium, Argyle ISD has to pass another bond that we are projecting for May of 2023."

Drive to Succeed - March 19, 2020

Emma Campbell | Junior Reporter

Senior Campbell Wilmot won first in the UIL Documentary State Film contest for her film 'Drive.' The film documented the story of Rhyle McKinney who, despite her hearing and breathing difficulties, still succeeds in basketball. Her film received superior in all

"When I joined The Talon my freshman year, I started doing more photos than videos," Wilmot said. "But as the years went by I learned from then seniors Annabel Thorpe and Lauren Landrum who taught me a little more about video and I discovered that that was my passion, more than photography or writing. So I decided that I wanted to do film."

Her journalism and broadcast teacher, Stacy Short, saw the win coming and wasn't surprised at all.

"I knew all of our documentaries this year were really strong, and I knew just from the reactions of people when they saw it that we would place in the top three for sure," Short said. "At that point you never know what the judges are going to like or dislike, but I've always been confident that they would be in the top three at state."

Senior Campbell Wilmot poses with her Division 1 Plaque at the UIL State Film Festival. (Gwende Wilmot | The Talon News)

Wilmot uses the people around her as inspiration to document high interest level stories.

"Rhyle, as it turns out, is one of my best friends and I had already known her story," Wilmot said. "We've been in school together since she moved here, which was in early grade school. I had always known her and I was brainstorming ideas, and she has a really powerful, motivational story so I thought, who better to film this over than one of my best friends?"

Wilmot says the time and effort put towards this film took "over 100 hours."

"I don't think that the gift of perfection came to her easily," Short said. " When she was a freshman, it wasn't something that came to her naturally. She truly had to work at it to figure everything out. Her true gift is passion and drive."

Though she is young, Wilmot has had a lot of experience and already created a large portfolio of finished projects. She is looking to pursue a career in the industry.

"She has one video that she did that has thousands of views, and this one that she won state, which is up to over 2,000 views now," Short said. "She's done music videos, highlight videos, football videos, and even started doing some weddings. She's been growing and maturing both as a photographer and videographer and she's doing great."

As someone who has worked hard and found a passion for film, Wilmot advocates that others try their hand at videography.

"If anybody wants to try out film, they should definitely go for it," Wilmot said. "You never know what stories you will discover. It really opens up other doors and gives you potential to do other things."

Students Advance to All-State Choir - January 28, 2020

Trinity Flaten | Co-Writing Editor

After 10 students auditioned at the area round of choir on Jan. 11, five students will be advancing to TMEA all-state, making school history as the largest amount of students to advance. These students will attend the all-state clinic in San Antonio from Feb. 12 to 15.

"We will all travel to San Antonio to join all the other all-state musicians, from orchestras to bands to other choirs," choir director Will Griswold said. "Those five students will go through two and a half days of rehearsal to perform a concert on Saturday afternoon for all the parents and choir directors throughout the state."

The auditions include three rounds: region, pre-area, and area. After each round, several students are selected to advance until it's narrowed down to 112 students in the state.

"They have to go in and sing for five judges," Griswold said. "Those scores are then combined to find the top singers for that round, and after each round, there are fewer and fewer that move on. It's a pretty difficult process."

For auditions, students prepare multiple pieces and at each round, a selection from those pieces is chosen for them to audition with.

"Sight reading is another component of the process," junior all-state qualifier Kassidy Rosengren said. "Once you arrive at the audition, they'll give eight measures of music you will have to sight-read during your audition."

To prepare, students not only practice their sight-reading skills but also attended a summer camp to learn their three or four audition pieces.

"I sing and work out every single part and make sure what I am going to do on every single note that I sing," freshman all-state qualifier Levi Pabst said. "Because that's going to be the difference between who gets in and who doesn't."

These students dedicated most of their free time to perfecting their audition pieces, including practicing before and after school and attending sectionals during lunch.

"As we got closer, we would rehearse with everybody as a full ensemble," Griswold said. "But lots of individual time and me encouraging them to practice at home to put in that extra time went in so they could be as comfortable as possible in the audition."

At the beginning of the process, close to 3,000 students enter and are narrowed down to the final members at the last audition.

"I feel like you would kind of expect it to be super competitive but it's not," Rosengren said. "Honestly, people are a little nervous before auditions, especially before sight reading because it's something you can't control, but you just kind of walk around hangout. You get to chill with your friends from school and you get to meet other people from other schools."

Griswold attempts to get as many students as possible to audition to help them in the future.

"Yes those five students worked their tails off to get to this point," Griswold said. "But if it weren't for the other 80 students in the program who were also working hard and also pushing these students to be better every rehearsal and every class, I don't think we would have that many students make all-state."

This was not Rosengren's first year making the all-state choir. She will be returning after qualifying last year as a sophomore.

"I was really nervous because I didn't know if I prepared as well as I did last year and I didn't know if I was going to be able to compare to what I did last year," Rosengren said. "It's kind of hard because I would always ask Griswold 'Do you feel like I am ready? Do you feel like I am all-state material?' because you're going against different people every year and auditioning for a different panel of judges every year. You really don't know what you are up against and you don't know what results you are going to get."

Including Rosengren and Pabst, freshman Aimee Gray, junior Austin Rusk, and junior Ethan Vanderwerken all made the all-state choir.

"Last year when I went to state I was all alone," Rosengren said. "I was so lonely because I was the only one from Argyle that made it and I didn't know anyone. Now I get to go with four other people. I'm really excited about the fact that I am able to just be with my friends and sing really challenging music."

At the all-state clinic, these students will get to work with Dr. Ken Fulton from Louisiana State University to further their musical abilities.

"When you look across the country, there's really nothing like the Texas all-state experience," Griswold said. "It's truly a unique once in a lifetime experience. It's bigger and better than all the other states, just because there are so many high-quality directors working with these students."

As the choir program continues to grow, Griswold expects more and more students to make the all-state choir, as two students were alternates this year and several others were only four or five chairs away from making it.

"I'm just really proud of the students," Griswold said. "Just so proud of them dedicating themselves to something that's super difficult and something that regardless of whether they make it or not, will turn them into better musicians."

"It's my very fervent belief that the more exposed to outside cultures you are, the better you are if you understand that not everyone sees the world through the same lens as you," AP World History teacher Matthew Woody said. "Not only is that about understanding the diversity that exists here at Argyle but also understanding that this diversity is Argyle."

Lady Eagles Take Second in State - March 8, 2020

Jaclyn Harris | Web and Print Director

The Argyle Lady Eagles took second place in the UIL state tournament with a 40-39 loss in overtime to the Fairfield Lady Eagles.

"This season has been incredible," Senior Rhyle McK-inney said. "Our bond this year has been the best it's ever been from the beginning to the end. Just after this game, we're all here for each other."

Argyle gained a quick lead in the first quarter, with Mckinney sinking the first shot and going on to lead the team in scoring with a total of 25 points. The quarter ended at 16-3 with Argyle ahead.

"I think we were just in that fine line of being up 14 points and asking 'do you keep attacking and making layups," Head Coach Chance Westmoreland said. "I thought we did a pretty good job. We didn't turn over a whole lot and we were just in that situation."

Fairfield attempted to close the gap beginning in the second quarter, but Argyle kept the lead with a score of 25-11 at the half.

"We played a great first half and at halftime we talked about it," Westmoreland said. "We talked about the score being zero to zero but they came out with a one-two-two and we quit attacking."

The third quarter marked the beginning of a comeback by Fairfield, but three missed free throws and a layup by McKinney allowed Argyle to maintain their lead at 27-22.

"We thought if we could win the third quarter we'd have a good chance to win," Westmoreland said. "They made some plays at the end and never gave up and their defense really turned it up in the second half."

With two seconds left in the fourth quarter, Fairfield's McKinna Brackens made a layup that tied up the game and led the teams into overtime with a score of 34-34.

> "I thought the first half our man-to-man defense was so good that if we could keep doing that we could win," Westmoreland said. "They made adjustments too. They kept driving and started posting 21 up, got us in foul trouble and that helped them."

In overtime, Fairfield led with a layup and free throw shot by Jada Clark, after which Argyle did not pull ahead, ultimately winning the game with a score of 40-39.

"The first two [free throws in the fourth quarter] went in and I didn't make the second one and I figured it would happen that it would go off the side and I would try to get it," McKinney said. "I just wasn't able to put it in. It was a hard loss for me, being my last game and all but I couldn't have asked for a better season."

The game was a contrast to when the team took on the Canyon Lady Eagles at the region tournament, when Argyle came back towards the end of the game.

"Against Canyon, we had a one-point lead with three and a half minutes left and we held the ball," Westmoreland said. "Stalled it, took the air out of it, and they fouled us with 55 seconds left. Rhyle makes both free throws and we played the free throws game from then on out and got the win. We were trying to get the last shot, but hats off to them. I should have made some adjustments"

Following the loss, Argyle ended the season with a final record of 33-8.

"For three years we shouldn't have won," Westmoreland said. "Nobody picked us to and everybody in that room is a champion. They've got gold medals and they're champions. So that's what we're going to be defined as."

Earning second place will end the Lady Eagle's streak of five-consecutive state championship titles.

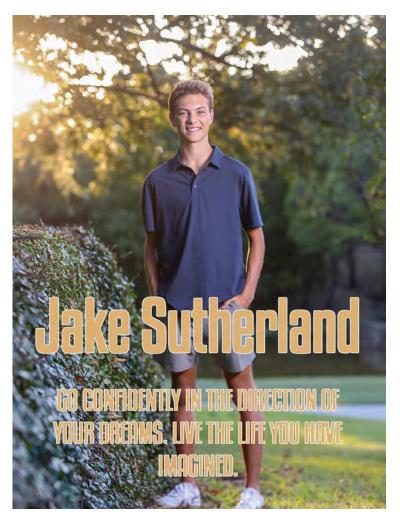

"I've been in this situation and I know how hard it can be," Westmoreland said. "We're not going to be defined by this game because they did what I asked. Even at the end of regulation I told them, we were up two points, I said. We're not going to be defined by this loss. It hurts, It's not fun, but my goodness, what a three-year ride we've been on."

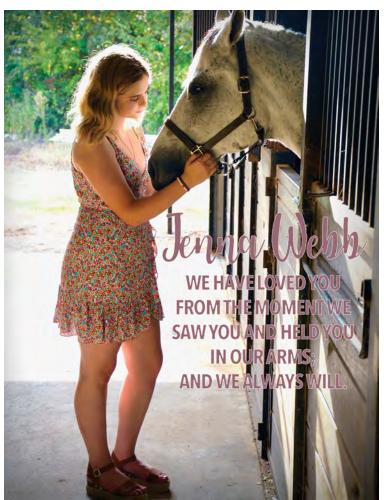

The Lady Eagles did not achieve their sixth state title but did accomplish one goal, according to McKinney: being together.

"Throughout this season our motto," McKinney said. "We've been together, and our coaching staff, trainers, and managers, everybody, we've all done it together. We're going to take this loss together. It was a great season."

Eagles Advance to State Tournament - March 8, 2020

REGION 1
STATE QUALIFIER

After a narrow victory over Clint, the Eagles defeated Pampa 46-29 in the second round of the region playoffs in Lubbock to advance to the state tournament for the first time since 2016.

The Eagles jumped out to a fast start, scoring 18 points in Q1, limiting the Harvesters to 5 points.

"Our kids came out focused and we did some good stuff," head coach Russell Perkins said. "The defense made the difference."

The Eagles' offense thrives when they are playing with a lead, and with Goodson's 10 first-half points, they were able to get ahead.

"Defense is our main point of emphasis each practice," junior point guard CJ Rogers said. "If we get that down, we know we're going to do our own thing on offense, so we just play as hard as we can defensively and let the offense come to us. Alex Daggett | Reporter

Goodson finished with 12 points in the game, earning him "Most Valuable Player" of the tournament.

"It was awesome," junior center Nate Atwood said. "Grey Goodson couldn't miss and that was so key for our victory."

The Eagles' strong defense and rapid scoring allowed them to lead the Harvesters 28-10 at the end of the half.

"Last game we played really bad," Goodson said. "So we wanted to come out, tough, get ahead and get the lead."

However, Pampa fought back bringing the score to 34-19 in Argyle's favor at the end of the third quarter, despite Atwood and Skylar McCurry combining for six points.

"Coming out in the third quarter, we struggled a bit," Rogers said. "But I think we all remembered Coach Vaughn's halftime speech, pushing us to the fourth quarter. He told us to just go out and don't let anything get past us."

The Eagles didn't let a quarter define them. They played a good defense complementing their offense. The Eagles never lost the lead and went on to defeat Pampa with a final score of 46-29.

"Our kids did a great job," Perkins said. "Sometimes you relax and start looking at the score, but the clock couldn't run fast enough. We were just trying to get through it."

The Eagles have been through a lot of adversity this season and have grown close bonds, which helped them to get to this spot on the playoffs.

"It went great for us and it's just so much fun to be out there with my brothers and competing and earning a ticket on the way to state," Atwood said.

With the defeat of the Harvesters, the Eagles will be playing in San Antonio for a chance at winning the state title.

"I'm super hyped for next week. It's going to be awesome," Godson said. "I think we can win the state title for sure. It'll be tough, but I think we can do it."

The Eagles will be playing for the state title for the first time since 2016, and hope to build on the success they have had so far in the playoffs.

"When you get that close to doing stuff, you just want to keep them going," Perkins said. "I don't know how fun it is spending spring break with teenagers, but it's a lot of fun spending it with these guys."

Their first semi-final game will be against Houston Stafford next Friday at 1 p.m. at the Alamodome in San Antonio. "[We'll have the] same mindset we had all year: just go out play as hard as we can, have fun and win," Rogers said.

With the onset of Covid-19 and "stay at home" orders by Governer Abbott, the UIL suspended all athletic competitions.

"To be that close you just don't get to to it that often, and for the seniors it's their last opportunity." Perkins said. "I just wish we had gotten to play our game."

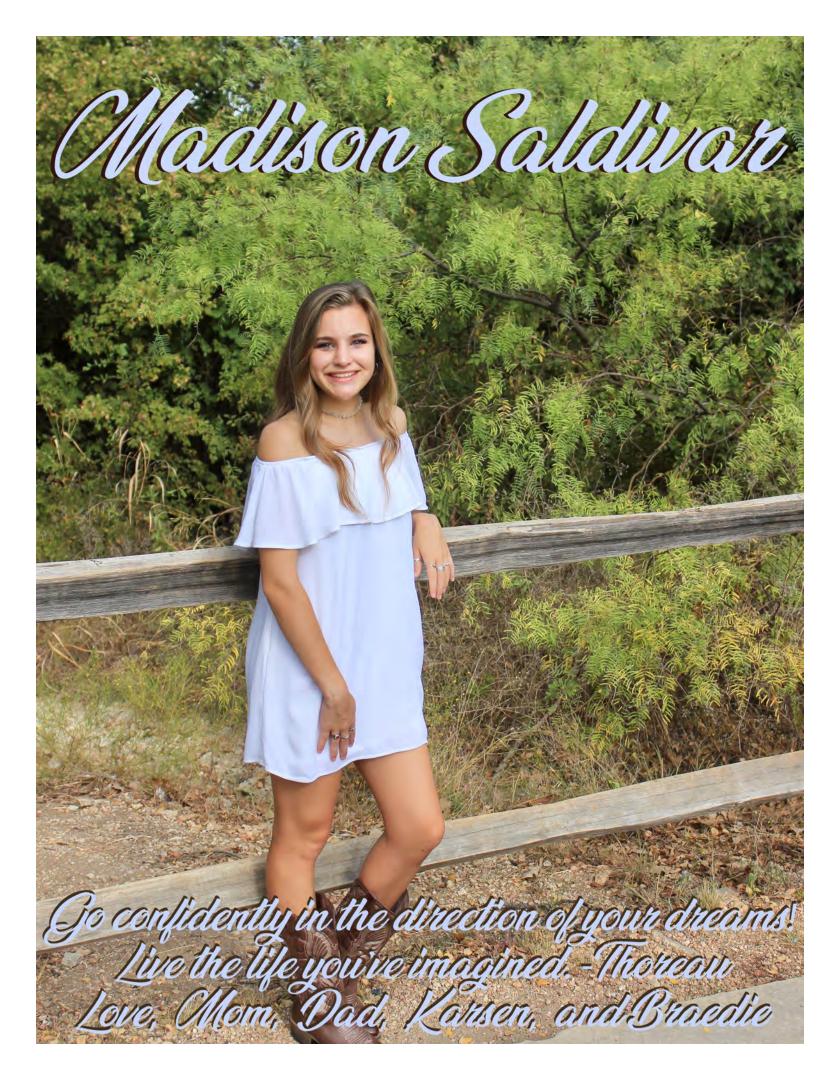

On April 28, Perkins received news from UIL that they would honor all state qualifiers with gold medals.

"UIL is trying to give us a tangible reminder of what our team accomplished," he said. "I'm thankful, but I am just so dissappointyed our guys didn't get to play and be a part of that experience and all that comes with that."

Congress Team Makes History - Jan. 21, 2020

Sarah Crowder | Co-Writing Editor

The debate team enjoyed great success while competing at the State Congressional Debate Meet in Austin on Jan. 14 and 15. Senior Savanna Lessley and junior Billy Mykel made school history by breaking to finals for the first time and ranked 15th and 16th respectively.

"I'm just overwhelmed," debate coach Jessica Reynolds said. "These kids have been making history on this debate team since I got here. They just always go above and beyond and each time we break through a barrier that we've never been through before I'm just so proud that we're doing a new thing in Argyle's history and bringing debate up to the level everything else at Argyle is." Congressional debate models on a smaller scale the way the United States Congress runs and works. Students submit their own legislation and after debating, vote to pass or defeat the new bills. "I think congressional debate has definitely pushed me in the direction of politics," Lessley said. "Going through the process of Congress and writing legislation has pointed me to understand more about the legislative process of our government and has definitely opened my eyes to how our

In preparation for the state meet, students prepared and gave multiple speeches every day in the affirmative and negation for 20 different bills. The bills this year included proposals to disband NASA and Lessley's own bill to set standards in space mining. "That would include doing a lot of background research on the topics at hand so I could fully understand what I was talking about," Lessley said. "As well as understanding the history of the ideas of these bills and resolutions and looking into any laws they may conflict with." Once the speeches were written, students have limited opportunities to showcase their skills and win over the judges during the actual rounds at state. "When it comes to the speeches, policies and our laws are actually we've had them written months in advance, but in the three minutes you get to talk per speech it really comes down to how you present yourself," Mykel said. "I'm more thinking about my speaking presence - trying to keep my vocals at an engaging degree, thinking about my presentation, and trying to fill as much space as I can."

the school to break to the final round and speaking in the state capitol building.

"I was so overwhelmed with emotions," Reynolds said. "We have been qualifying for this event for state for three years now and each year have not qualified for the final round. Billy's name was called first because they went alphabetically by first name and

Speaking with and competing against the top debaters in the state can be nervewracking. "I did feel a lot of pressure throughout the rounds and it definitely increased the pressure that it was essential my last chance since I'm a senior," Lessley said. "But as the round progressed, I realized more that it was my last congress round. At that point instead of my mind focussing on actually placing and scoring high in the room, I wanted more to just give a good speech and represent Argyle in the best way possible." Making it to the state level is an achievement in and of itself, but Lessley and Mykel surpassed expectations by being the first in

I gasped and couldn't communicate. When Savanna's name was called I'm embarrassed to say I cried like a big ol' baby because I was very proud."

Reynolds has been championing

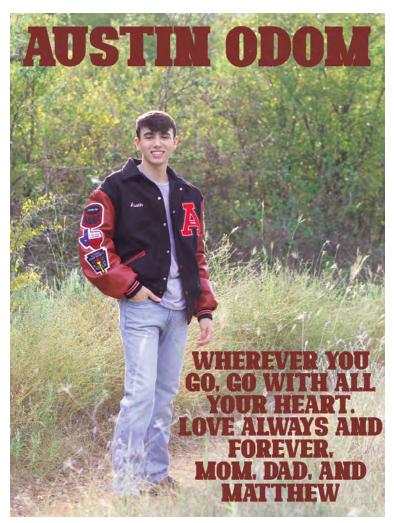

Reynolds has been championing the relatively young debate team for the past three years.

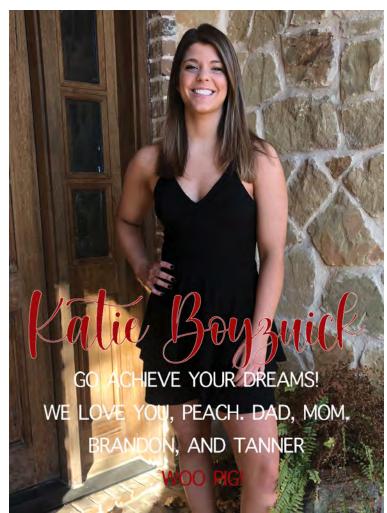

"She likes to joke that she got thrown into this," Mykel said. "But when it comes to debate, she is probably the best coach our team could've had. She does so much for our team, whether it's driving us to faraway tournaments, hiring judges, or figuring out strategies. It's far beyond anything we could've asked for." Debate can be a very stressful activity, particularly for students with anxiety, so Reynolds also tries to be as nurturing as possible and see her kids as people first and debaters second.

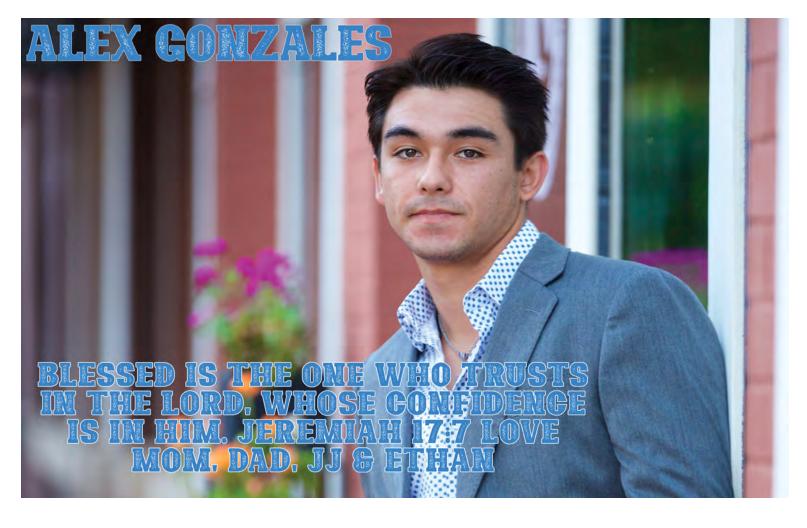

"Ms. Reynolds has put a lot of focus on making us better speakers," Lessley said. "But not only that, but she has also made this event entertaining and something that we all want to do and she definitely puts a lot of energy in that. I appreciate Ms. Reynolds as a debate coach and as a mentor, she has had a profound impact on my debate skills and my entire life."

Competing at the state level has given Lessley and Mykel numerous opportunities and a crucial skill set. Their knowledge of public speaking, current events, and their ability to view things from multiple sides will equip them for the real world.

"My kids research 20 different real-world issues that our congress right now is debating on," Reynolds said. "They research that and had to speak as experts on all of these subjects and it's just so important. I always think that when I go to vote, I would rather have one of my debate kids next to me in the voting booth rather than a kid who hasn't had all of this experience. They're so well informed and I think it makes them great productive citizens when they become adults. " The debate team has no plans to slow down and are already working on cross-examination, Lincoln-Douglass, extemporaneous, and congress for next year. "The competing team next year will comprise of Joe Thompson, Tristan Ball, and myself if nothing changes," Mykel said. "It's still going to be a lot of work and we're going to be putting a lot of effort into new bills which is exciting. With regard to congress, our future is bright."

It's half-time at the football game.

They march out in matching uniforms and shakos, moving in unison across the field to the rhythm of the drums. The crowd watches in awe as they perform a choreographed show. By the time they are finished, the stands have erupted into applause.

Led by 15 key seniors, this year's marching band has continued the program's legacy of greatness. Over their four year campaign, the seniors have led the band to two silver state medals and an area title.

"They are not only leaders on their instruments, but they also lead by example, showing how to behave or what to do," band director Asa Burk said. "They have the experience. They just do the things that they're supposed to do and people follow because they are successful."

The band program is a tradition for some families, with younger siblings following in the footsteps of older family members.

"My brother was a junior when we moved here, and I was in fifth grade," senior ensemble captain and band president Tatum Earp said. "I was mad that I had to go to every contest because they took forever. But then we got to the state marching contest, and I saw them, and that's when they finally clicked as a band. It was super cool to see their performance. I was like 'that's amazing!' and immediately I was like 'I want to be a part of that."

Since rehearsals started in July, the band has conducted practices six days a week, including two rehearsals every Monday.

"Band is a really big commitment," senior band member Elizabeth West said. "We put a bunch of work and hours into it, and sometimes it feels like it isn't properly recognized. I feel like more people should be aware of how much time goes into our show."

Seventh-year band member and current drum major Taylor

Childress believes that the seniors play an important role in the band.

"[The freshman] definitely look up to the seniors," Childress said. "They will remember our leadership styles and personality." The seniors have helped the program start its transition from a small school to a large school, a move that takes time and commitment in order to happen successfully.

"In the next two or three

Being a part of band is not an easy extracurricular and something that should not be taken lightly.

"Being in band has taught me work ethic," West said.
"During marching season, at the beginning of the year, you get your music and you struggle through learning it. There's countless hours of playing it over and over again and then later in the season when you actually get to see the show, you see that it was all worth it and there are so many little things that came together. It's amazing."

In marching band, bands only have the chance to qualify for state every other year. Although this year is not a state year, the band has already earned first place at three competitions this season, with two of them being against 5A and 6A schools.

"I really consider the state marching silver medals to be super important," Earp said. "I know a lot of people outside the band program, or even inside the program, consider that to be a loss for us because the band has won gold medals before that. It's really not a disappointment at all and it's extremely remarkable to even make it to the state marching contest."

years, we will probably go 5A, which means there is a bigger jump in competition level and requirements," Burk said. "Our kind of immediate and near-future goals are to get the band prepared for that competition level. We're not trying to be competitive and good enough to be considered great for 4A, we want to be considered competitive for 5A. When we grow to a 5A officially, we want to compete on that level so we aren't the low man on the totem pole and we aren't behind the curve trying to catch up. We want to be just like how Argyle's always done."

Involvement in band helps students evolve as both a group and as individuals.

"You learn what your natural tendencies are as either a leader or a follower," Earp said. "I tend to be a natural leader and I like to take charge of things. I had to learn to set that aside and say 'I'm going to follow what this other leader is doing' because that cohesiveness is so much more important than being the person at the front."

Senior drum major Carter McNulty is currently in his seventh-year of band and believes band has taught him more than just teamwork.

"I have learned accountability and responsibility," McNulty said. "I'd be a lot lazier than I already am if I wasn't in band."

While band students do have the early practices, the long travels and the never-ending choreography to memorize, Childress believes it does pay off in the end.

"I have learned what it really means to have integrity and that your character really shows through in high-stress situations," Childress said. "It is a lot of hard work, but it is worth it in the end."

The students who participate in band have a special connection that is visible even to those on the outside looking in.

"It's family both in a positive and negative sense," Earp said. "You really grow towards these people and become friends with them. You have all the normal sibling bickering, and it can be really complicated, but it's so worth it and so fun."

Many of the seniors plan to continue some form of music through college, whether it be majoring in band or keeping it up as a hobby.

"There's something about just playing music together," Earp said. "Performing is one of the greatest joys of my life, and that's why I'm pursuing it in the future."

Burk said his favorite part of his job is seeing students "start at square one and watch them go through their journey to a performance."

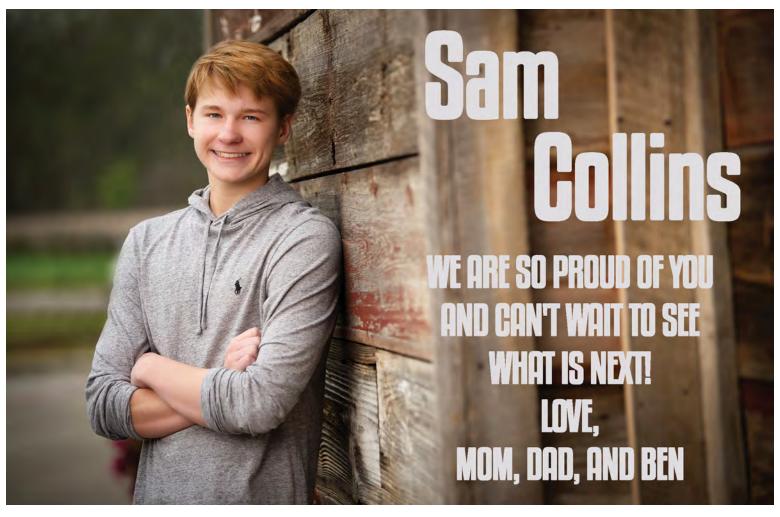

"I think there is a bunch of hard-working kids that are super, super dedicated to music or their instrument," Burk said. "They just enjoy what they do and work hard at it."

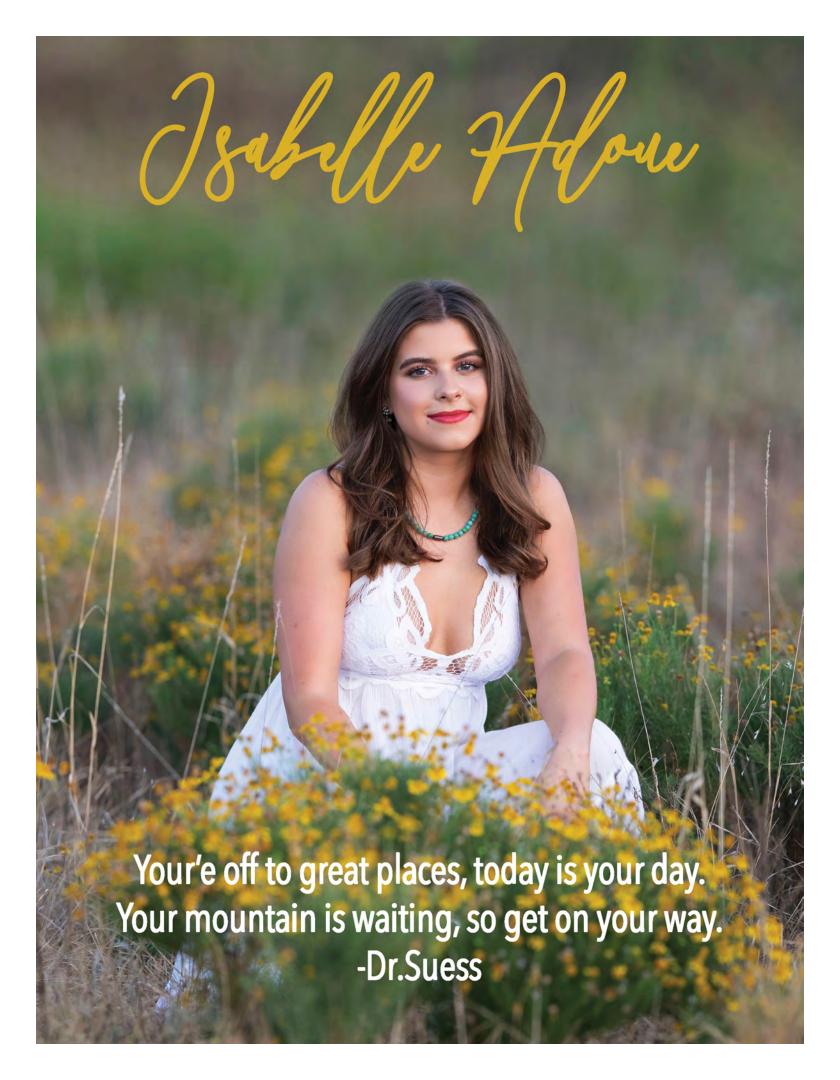

Although band is not an easy commitment, it is one that benefits both students and the program as a whole.

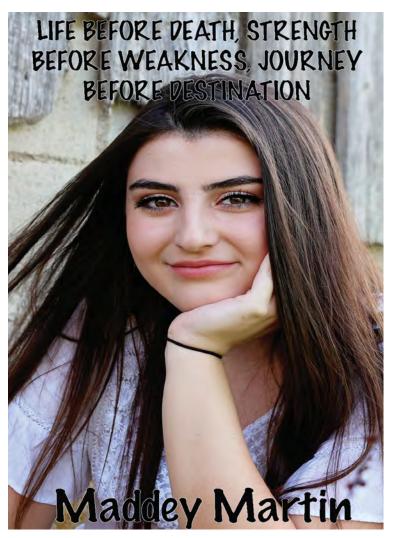

"The big thing about band is that it's not about you," Earp said. "You have to sacrifice everything you have. You have to put in the work and time, but the reward from all that is absolutely incredible."

School Establishes GSA Club - Nov. 18, 2019

To educate and promote acceptance, two students founded a Gay-Straight Alliance (GSA) club. The club meets during A-lunch in World History teacher Matthew Woody's room.

"Well, I realized that although there are many queer students at Argyle," senior co-founder Shay Tjandramulia said, "There wasn't really a safe space for us to talk about our issues. I was so surprised no one had done it yet so I was like 'If someone has to do it, why not me?"

After Shay came up with the idea of creating a GSA club, they approached Woody and librarian Alicia Montogomery about making it a reality and discussed how to move forward from there.

"I had a student approach me, wanting to start the club and being a teacher and an educator I need to be here for kids no matter what," Montgomery said. "I knew it was a great opportunity to accomplish something they really wanted to do so I wanted to help them in any way I could."

The club, originally planned to begin in the winter of last year, was pushed back until the beginning of this school year. Now that it's begun, the club is largely student lead.

"There are three aspects to [the club]: social, advocacy, and education," Tjandramulia said. "We've been talking about LGBTQ+ history month and I was thinking of doing something for Trans Day of Silence. Trans Day of Remembrance is coming up in November and we want to do a vigil for all of the trans people who have died this year."

The main goal for the club is to establish acceptance for the students and a place to discuss these issues.

"I feel like it achieves its mission on day one simply by having a space for people to feel comfortable," Woody said. "If we just take it a day at a time and gain a little acceptance here in the classroom and have it spread throughout the school then that's awesome, that's great."

According to the Human Rights Campaign, 92% of LGBT youth say that theyw have heard negative comments about being LGBT.

"It's really so that people feel open and feel like they can be open," sophomore Luci Reed said. "So its more so for people to know that it's ok to be who they are instead of hiding it."

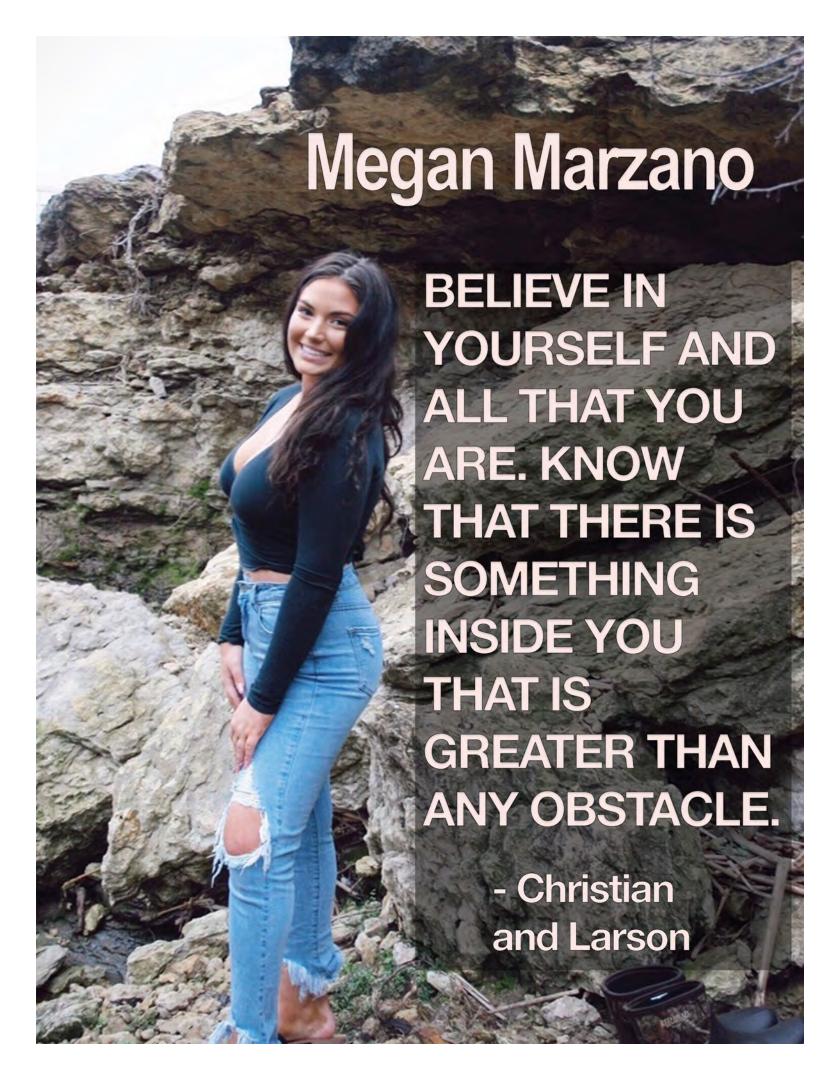

This is the first time a club geared toward LGBT students has been established at Argyle High School.

"I'm incredibly proud of the group," Montgomery said. "I know that the student who approached me wanting to start the group really took a risk and was really passionate about it, and because of her passion is why it got started. It could have fizzled out, but she was really committed, and ready to work hard to make sure it got off the ground. I think it's great to see young people on fire and really dedicated to something, and I know I'm going to keep feeling like that all year."

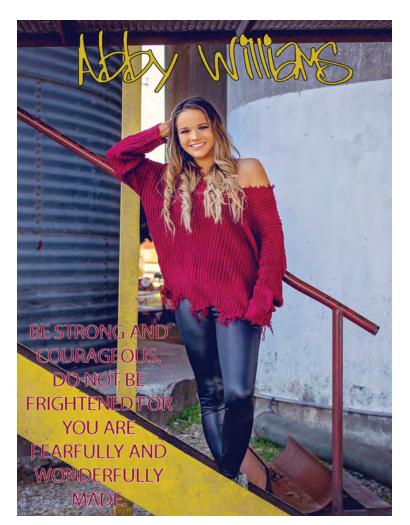

Already, the club has begun accomplishing its goal of promoting tolerance and kindness, and more importantly, making students feel like they can embrace who they are.

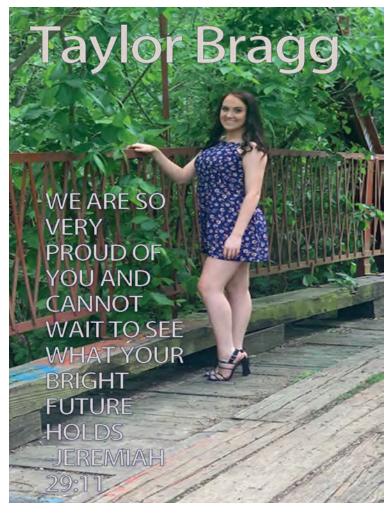

"What I do see," Woody said. "Is students who don't normally participate in class, participating in the GSA club. Voices that are normally quiet, are no longer quiet, and it's so cool because they may not feel the confidence to speak up."
